TECHEXPO Job Fairs Return to New York City

New York, NY – After a four-year hiatus due to the economy and labor market, New York’s largest job fair producer for the technology, telecommunications, and engineering sectors from 1995-2002, TECHEXPO, returns on March 15th to bring experienced professionals together with employers.

“Technology skills are finally back in demand across the board,” says Bradford Rand, President & CEO of TECHEXPO, adding “with changes that affect IT infrastructure like the Sarbanes-Oxley and HIPAA, more organizations must grow their technology team.” According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics’ web site “computer scientists and database administrators are expected to be among the fastest growing occupations through 2014.”

Tiffany Morant of Bloomberg’s Central Recruiting team reports “hiring needs have increased over the past couple of years as the business continues to grow. Bloomberg is growing as a business globally and we need the sales and technical force to support that growth.”

50 employers and over 600 candidates are expected to participate in the event. Among the participating employers at the TECHEXPO job fair are Moody’s Investment Services, UBS, CheckFree Investment Services, Sharp Decisions Inc., SunGard Consulting Services, Mailroom Technology Inc., Bloomberg LP, Sirius Satellite Radio, New York Mercantile Exchange, WebMD, JetBlue Airways, GE Asset Management, Telephonics, Lloyd Information Technology, and many more.
